These are not struggling businesses. They are not your friend. No one in DC and hardly anyone even the outskirts are your friends in that area. I am not kidding outside of maybe a hand full of people that are not actual conservative staffers or maybe some lobbyists, it is essentially 100% full fledged, bonafide, enemies, foreign and domestic ... literally. They hate you, they hate America, they are only parasites on America, they hate European people, they are an aristocracy that hates the peasants. They are the enemy and they are legitimate targets since our government is not legitimate through its own actions and words, regardless of what you or I may think. The American people have just been manipulated and brainwashed so long that they never realized the bait and switch takeover, invasion, occupation, conquest, and domination of America and the European people.

The oath keepers are the ultimate larpers. They only care about their "oaths" when it's easy. They'll be the first to stand up for the constitution when the government tells them that's ok. Hell, their membership is exclusively made up of ex police, first responders, and servicemen. People that were in positions to make a difference. If they had upheld their oaths while they served maybe our Republic wouldn't be on the verge of death. I bet many of the current police, servicemen, and first responders will join the oathkeepers when they retire too...

▼ The only thing is they'd be fasting as a newbie, out of the blue, while marching around DC and who knows what else happening. If they've never done it before, their system really won't handle it well while they're also doing a lot of activity, probably more active than they usually are. Newbie fasters also might not realize how much water+electrolytes they need.

2 I recently bought my Dad a Grill for Christmas, $160 or so for a Coleman portable propane grill. Has its own stand, and wheels for ease of mobility. Fits small propane bottles.
